RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Master's Dissertation: "The Association Between Emotional Intelligence, Forgiveness, and Social Support Among Young Adults"

Key findings

- Emotional intelligence was not significantly related to either forgiveness or perceived social support.
- Forgiveness was positively associated with support from friends, highlighting the role of peer relationships.
- Female participants reported more support from significant others; no gender difference found in EI or forgiveness.

This study sparked a deeper interest in neuropsychological mechanisms of EI and its protective role in psychopathology.
